

MANSION

Bedrooms have glass walls that open onto an indoor garden with a black-tiled floor and lots of plants. A bathroom has steel-framed walls and doors of transparent and translucent glass.

apartment was a deliberate choice. "For the price we paid we could have been high above the clouds," he says, adding, "Twenty years ago luxury meant isolation. Today more people want community." To achieve that, "We should wisely use things that are free and fun," he says. "Light and air are free; visual connections are free."

Eran knows the other residents of the six-unit Tribeca building, as well as their dogs. (His is a chocolate lab named Boo.) "We feel part of the neighborhood fabric," he says.

Becoming part of that neighborhood took a lot of work. The loft fills an entire floor of an L-shaped 1883 building and a smaller building that "fills in" the empty corner of the L. Connecting them at the second floor level meant removing parts of what had been their exterior walls. Before the contractors could do that, Eran says, they had to insert steel beams to support the four floors above his.

That was expensive, as were the steel-framed interior doors and windows. The loft is so big, Eran says, that he was able to bring in metalworkers to make the window frames on site. That allowed them to adjust to tiny imperfections in the 140-year-old building. "Everything was custom-made in the space for the space," says Eran, who often walked over from his firm's office at 99 Hudson Street to monitor construction. Meanwhile, the Chens lived in an Upper West Side apartment and their weekend house in Waccabuc, N.Y.

Dafna was less directly involved in the project than her husband. "I would design every item and show her the choices," Eran says. "There were only a few disagreements and naturally she prevailed." As an example, he says, "I was pressing for natural stone in our bathroom. She wanted tile. We ended up using tile, and she was right."

A large, open-plan living and dining area. In the foreground, a long, dark wood dining table is partially visible. To the right, there are bright red modular sofas. In the center, a large, dark, abstract sculpture hangs from the ceiling. The background features a kitchen area with a brick wall and a dining table with chairs. The space is characterized by its high ceilings and exposed wooden beams.

Eran has come a long way from the public housing of his childhood. He studied architecture at the Bezalel Academy of Art in Jerusalem. After graduating in 1999, he came to New York, he says, with "just a suitcase." He took a job at Perkins Eastman, a global architecture firm. Coming from a small town in a from a small town in a small country, he says, he made a deliberate choice to learn about the workings of a large-scale practice. After seven years, he went out on his own, calling his firm

ODA (for Office of Design and Architecture), perhaps in homage to Rem Koolhaas's Rotterdam-based OMA (Office for Metropolitan Architecture),

He landed his first client by offering to do the job for half the standard fee. Soon the firm was designing building after building in New York, including the renovated 10 Jay

There, ODA restored the masonry on three sides of an old brick warehouse building but turned the fourth side, facing the East River, into a crystalline glass surface.

New York include the 100 Norfolk condo on the Lower East Side and Galerie condo in Long Island City. ODA buildings often take novel forms, many resembling stacks of blocks with extreme setbacks and cantilevers.

The firm, with about 100 employees, has been expanding both nationally (with, for example, large mixed-use projects in Charlotte, N.C., and Washington, D.C.) and internationally, with projects in Europe, South America and Asia. In a book about the practice, "ODA: Office of Design and Architecture" (Rizzoli), out this month, the architecture critic Paul Goldberger writes: "ODA's work shows formal inventiveness, a willingness to solve problems, and most important of all, a recognition that no building is purely an object in itself, but a part of a larger urban whole."

Lately, Ernan has been exploring the larger urban whole of Tel Aviv, where he is building apartment towers that put his ideas to the test. He says, "if people would feel better connected to their community you create a better culture and then a better world."

Dafna, Eran and about a dozen other people could fit on their Living Divani sofa. The kitchen island has work surfaces and a 'lower deck' for family meals.

[illegible]

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

DOW JONES | News & Analysis *****

FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 2024 • VOL. CCLXXXIII NO. 56

WSJ.com

★★★★ $5.00

DJIA 38,991.35 ▲ 110.30 0.3%

NASDAQ 16,273.38 ▲ 1.5%

STOXX 600 503.16 ▲ 1.0%

10-YR. TREAS. ▲ 4/32, yield 4.090%

OIL $78.93 ▼ $0.20

GOLD $2,158.00 ▲ $7.70

EURO $1.0950

YEN 148.05

What's News

Business & Finance

◆ The federal government began taking steps this week toward collecting as much as $20 billion in delinquent loans it made to small businesses and nonprofits during the Covid-19 pandemic. A1

◆ U.S. stocks rose, with the S&P 500 gaining 1% to close at a record and the Nasdaq and Dow advancing 1.5% and 0.3%, respectively. B11

◆ Boeing, under fire for production snafus, will overhaul how it pays employee bonuses to emphasize quality and safety over meeting financial targets. B3

◆ NYCB slashed its quarterly dividend to 1 cent a share, part of an overhaul aimed at shoring up confidence in the troubled regional lender. B2

◆ Chemours executives shifted cash flows at year-end to hit targets that determined their annual stock and bonus awards, an internal investigation found. B3

◆ Rivian unveiled two new sport-utility vehicles that the EV maker hopes will be a springboard for its sales. B4

◆ Merck KGaA expects to return to organic growth this year after reporting a slump in earnings for 2023. B4

◆ Hugo Boss said it expects sales and earnings to grow this year, but warned it might not meet 2025 sales guidance. B3

◆ Kroger reported that fourth-quarter sales rose 6% as the supermarket operator's CEO expressed optimism about consumer sentiment. B9

◆ The ECB held its key interest rate at a record and signaled it won't begin cutting rates before June. A8

World-Wide

◆ Biden sought to convince Americans that his policies have bolstered the economy and protected their freedoms in a State of the Union address designed to draw a sharp contrast with Republicans and Trump. A1, A4

◆ The president announced that the U.S. military will install a pier off the Gaza coast for cargo ships to unload emergency supplies, boosting the direct U.S. role in addressing the strip's humanitarian crisis. A7

◆ Power lines ignited the Smokehouse Creek Fire that burned more than a million acres in the Texas Panhandle, state investigators said. A3

◆ A congressional probe of Chinese-built cranes at U.S. ports found communications gear that doesn't appear to support normal operations, fueling concerns the cranes may pose a national security risk. A2

◆ Russia attacked Ukrainian forces at points along the 600-mile front line as it seeks to capitalize on its recent capture of the eastern city of Avdiivka. A16

◆ Americans support both tougher border security and a pathway to citizenship for longtime immigrants living in the country illegally, a new Wall Street Journal poll found. A4

◆ More children visited emergency rooms after ingesting melatonin in unsupervised settings, with at least half the admissions involved flavored products. A3

◆ The centrist group No Labels is expected to proceed with plans to pick an independent "unity" ticket for the presidential election. A6

◆ The centrist group No Labels is expected to proceed with plans to pick an independent "unity" ticket for the presidential election. A6

◆ The centrist group No Labels is expected to proceed with plans to pick an independent "unity" ticket for the presidential election. A6

◆ The centrist group No Labels is expected to proceed with plans to pick an independent "unity" ticket for the presidential election. A6

© 2024 Dow Jones & Company Inc. All Rights Reserved

President Biden gave his State of the Union address in front of Vice President Kamala Harris and House Speaker Mike Johnson.

Biden Paints Stark Differences With GOP in State of the Union

By Ken Thomas and Tareni Pariti

WASHINGTON—Confronting congressional Republicans, President Biden on Thursday sought to convince Americans that his policies have bolstered the economy and protected their freedoms in a State of the Union address that repeatedly drew contrasts with former President Donald Trump.

Biden's speech before a joint session of Congress focused heavily on his case for a second term. It came two days after Trump cemented his position as the presumptive Republican nominee with victories in nearly all of the Super Tuesday states, setting the stage for an unusual rematch between two candidates who have both sat behind the Resolute Desk.

Biden, a Democrat, said his lifetime "has taught me to embrace freedom and democracy. A future based on the core values that have defined America: honesty, decency, dignity, equality." He added, in a veiled reference to Trump: "Now some other people my age see a different story: an American story of resentment, revenge, and retribution. That's not me."

Biden never uttered Trump's name but referred to his "predecessor" more than a dozen times, repeatedly comparing his record with Trump's. He appeared to relish a give-and-take with congressional Republicans who largely oppose his agenda. At one point, he referred to the bipartisan border agreement in the Senate that would have allowed the government to expel migrants if crossings surpassed a daily threshold of 4,000, prompting jeers from Republicans.

"Oh, you don't like that bill, huh?" he asked. Trump opposed the plan and urged congressional Republicans to reject it. "I'll be damned," he said, adding later he is ready to fix the border if Republicans pass the Senate agreement.

Biden also went off-script. Please turn to page A4

◆ President seeks corporate tax increases..... A4

◆ Britt criticizes Biden in Republican response..... A4

◆ Americans back deal on border, poll finds..... A4

◆ Biden to boost aid to Gaza with offshore pier..... A7

Please turn to page A2

Apple Confronts Headwinds From EU's Tech Law

By Sam Schechner and Kim MacRae

In the battle for smartphone dominance, Google stands out to gain an advantage over Apple from an unlikely source: a new European law.

Starting this week, the world's largest technology companies have to comply with the European Union's Digital Markets Act, a sweeping new law aimed at boosting competition from smaller companies in the realm of digital advertising, online search and app ecosystems.

In the near term, one of its biggest impacts could be in the rivalry between Apple and Google.

The law is pushing Apple to open up certain parts of its app ecosystem in the EU, allowing third-party app stores for the first time and permitting alternative in-app payment services on iPhones across the bloc.

Apple lobbied heavily against the moves, which reshape a part of its business that brings in billions of dollars in revenue.

Google lobbied in favor of mandating a more open approach to how apps are downloaded. The Alphabet unit already allows outside app stores on its Android mobile operating system and could seek to take advantage of other provisions.

Please turn to page A6

◆ Heard on the Street: EU law worries investors..... B12

TOMORROW

WSJ. MAGAZINE

KEVIN HART

◆ Probe feeds worries on Chinese cranes..... A2

◆ Foreign minister throws barbs at U.S...... A16

China Intensifies Push To Delete American Tech

A directive known as Document 79 ramps up Beijing's effort to replace U.S. technology with homegrown alternatives

By Liza Lin

For American tech companies in China, the writing is on the wall. It's also on paper, in Document 79.

The 2022 Chinese government directive expands a drive that is muscling U.S. technology out of the country—an effort some refer to as "Delete A." for Delete America.

Document 79 was so sensitive that high-ranking officials and executives were only shown the order and weren't allowed to make copies, people familiar with the matter said. It requires state-owned companies in finance, energy and other sectors to replace foreign software in their IT systems by 2027.

American tech giants had long thrived in China as they hot-wired the country's meteoric industrial rise with computers, operating systems and software.

Chinese leaders want to sever that relationship, driven by a push for self-sufficiency and concerns over the country's long-term security.

The first targets were hardware makers. Dell, International Business Machines and Cisco Systems have gradually seen much of their equipment replaced by products from China.

Please turn to page A9

◆ Probe feeds worries on Chinese cranes..... A2

◆ Foreign minister throws barbs at U.S...... A16

Step Aside, Pickleball, Cricket Is America's New Local Battlefront

Cities weigh stadiums for unfamiliar sport, sparking confusion: 'Like in England? Why?'

By Scott Calvert

Tara McDade is a big sports fan, but like many Americans, she doesn't know much about the game of cricket.

"You swing at a ball, I believe," says the Fairfax, Va., resident.

What she does know is she has real concerns about a proposed venue for the sport that could rise close to her Northern Virginia home.

She and her neighbors have organized to press nearby George Mason University and the Washington Freedom pro cricket team to halt plans for a new combined cricket-baseball stadium that could host thousands of spectators.

Putting Best Paw Forward

SHOWTIME: A standard poodle awaits an appearance in the Toy and Utility class on the first day of the four-day Crufts dog show in Birmingham, England. The show dates to 1891.